

Author launches updated memoir

Entrepreneur and former political activist, Alison Weihe, launched Belonging: Finding Tribes of Meaning at Exclusive Books at the V&A Waterfront, on Thursday August 29. In this memoir, the Johannesburg author shares some of her life's intimate moments, from her childhood living in Rondebosch to building a business and almost losing it. She draws on her life experiences as a speaker, mother, daughter, wife and identity intelligence coach. This memoir is an updated version of her 2022 book of the same name.

■ Alison Weihe returned to her home town to launch an update of her book, Belonging: Finding Tribes of Meaning, right, with Kim Vermaak, left, from Johannesburg.

■ Karen Brown from Constantia with the author's husband, Friedel Weihe from Honeydew, Johannesburg.

■ Alexander Arendse of Brackenfell with Nureesah Hendricks of Wynberg.
